

Strega Nona is another of the many suggested books in the Creative Curriculum.

Strega Nona cooks up potions to help meet the needs of the people in her village. Perhaps your children would like to create a recipe for a potion. Begin by gathering measuring tools—let them decide what to use. Many of the objects in your classroom may lend themselves to this purpose. (How much is a skosh anyway?) These questions may guide your creation:

1. What will our potion help with?
2. What ingredients do we want to include/why?
3. How much of each ingredient do we need?

Strega Nona is another of the many suggested books in the Creative Curriculum.

Strega Nona cooks up potions to help meet the needs of the people in her village. Perhaps your children would like to create a recipe for a potion. Begin by gathering measuring tools—let them decide what to use. Many of the objects in your classroom may lend themselves to this purpose. (How much is a skosh anyway?) These questions may guide your creation:

1. What will our potion help with?
2. What ingredients do we want to include/why?
3. How much of each ingredient do we need?